

GLOBAL PROBLEM SOLVING CONSORTIUM

The University of Delhi is a founding member of Global Problem Solving Consortium coordinated by George Mason University, Virginia and has following eight universities as its members,

- George Mason University, Virginia, USA
- University of Delhi, Delhi, India
- University of Brasilia, Brazil
- Tsinghua University, China
- Yonsei University, Korea
- Kenyatta University, Kenya
- Higher School of Economics, Russia
- Istanbul Sehir University, Istanbul

The objective of the consortium is to offer focused programs that bring their students and faculty members together to improve both their knowledge of global issues and their awareness of how other major societies approach the issues. The Consortium offered its first summer workshop on Water Management for Environment Sustainability, in July 2013.

Mr. Mayank Jain, a student of the Cluster Innovation Centre, University of Delhi participated in the Summer Workshop

For information and updates on the consortium please refer to the link < <http://masonglobal.gmu.edu/global-problem-solving-consortium/> >