

Looking for PhD inspiration?

With Universitas 21, the world's your oyster...

Universitas 21 (www.universitas21.com), the leading global network of universities, has established a unique framework for jointly awarded PhDs. Under this scheme two partner universities will create a tailor-made programme of study for each student, taking individual research needs into account and enabling collaboration with another leading university. This exciting programme will enhance considerably students' research and employment opportunities on an international scale.

For students of these jointly awarded PhDs this means:

- ♦ an academic research programme enhanced by the collaboration of two different high-quality research environments and cultures
 - ♦ training and facilities of two research-intensive universities
 - ♦ the added value of international networking
- ♦ a head start in future career planning and professional development

The 14 international institutions currently involved in the programme are

University of Auckland ♦ University of Birmingham ♦ University of British Columbia
University of Delhi ♦ University College Dublin ♦ University of Edinburgh
University of Glasgow ♦ University of Hong Kong ♦ Korea University
McGill University ♦ University of Melbourne ♦ University of Nottingham
University of Queensland ♦ University of Virginia

"This marks a key development in the way in which U21 universities are approaching study and research. Not only does this distinguish us from the other programmes already in existence, by being focused clearly on the needs of the individual students, but it sets a new benchmark for international collaboration at PhD level and is a trend which I believe is one which should be followed by other major networks and consortia."
